UN blames military for political killings

GMA orders release of Melo report, P25M to CHR

By Fe Zamora

WHATEVER THE FIGURE, THE NUMBER OF KILLINGS of journalists and leftist activists in the Philippines is "distressing," and President Macapagal-Arroyo should persuade the Armed Forces to "acknowledge" the fact and conduct a "genuine" investigation, United Nations Special Rapporteur Philip Alston said yesterday.

Alston, who has just concluded a 18-day visit to "explore into the phenomenon of extrajudicial executions," also said the President should make public the findings of the Melo Commission, which failed to find May Gen. Jovito Pelayo and other military commanders in the killings.

Alston said he did not know exactly how many had died, but added:

"I am certain the number is high enough to be distressing."

"The impact of even a limited number of killings of the type alleged is certain to be huge," he said.

While the President's directives in response to the Melo Report "improve important first steps," he said, "a huge amount" of work needed to be done.

The human rights group Kapangayan claims that more than 800 people, mostly leftist activists, had been

Defense, AFP silent on report; Gonzalez says Alston brainwashed

By Leticia B. Salaverria,
Michael Lee Ubac
and Akela Papa

THE DEFENSE AND MILITARY ESTABLISHMENTS yesterday chose silence vis-a-vis the initial findings of United Nations Special Rapporteur Philip Alston, but Justice Secretary Rod Gonzales came out with guns blazing.

Gonzales said Alston was closing his eyes to the purported atrocities committed by the AFP, and repressed the belief that the latter had been brainwashed by leftist groups.

"Sir Alston is in denial, he's in denial the atrocities of the other side," the justice secretary told reporters when asked for comment.

"When you tell him, 'This is a taped message from (Jose Maria) Sison,' he will tell you that was long ago," Gonzales said in reference to the founding chair of the Commission on Human Rights and now consultant of its political arm, the National Democratic Front.

In Malabon, President Macapagal-Arroyo ordered her spokesperson, Press Secretary Ignacia Buaya, to make public the report of the Melo Commission.

The President also announced that she had authorized the release of P25 million to the Commission on Human Rights, "so that it can do more to investigate human rights violations and build training programs for government actors such as the military."

P61-B loot recovered; no one jailed

(Editorial note: On Feb. 22, 1986, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Philippine Constabulary Chief Gen. Fidel Ramos broke away from President Ferdinand Marcos, sparking a People Power Revolution. This led to the ouster of Marcos on Feb. 25 1986 and the installation of Corason Aquino as President. In a series of articles that began today, the Inquirer reviews efforts to recover the ill-gotten wealth of the Marcoses and their associates that began with the setting up of the Presidential Commission on Good Government. Today, there is a perception that while the PCGG has succeeded in recovering some plundered assets, it has destroyed many of the companies that it has acquired through widespread buying by government nominees on its behalf.)

IN ONE OF THE MOST CRITICAL ACTS AFTER the peaceful People Power Revolution of 1986, President Corason Aquino issued directives to recover ill-gotten wealth of the deposed Ferdinand Marcos, his family and associates and to bring them to justice.

Executive Order No. 1 was signed on Feb. 26, four days after Marcos fled a howling mob outside the gates of Malacañang and flew into self-imposed exile, ending 20 years in office.

It established the Presidential Commission on Good Government, whose main purpose was to establish a new moral order, eliminate the vestiges of the dictatorship, seize cash and property illegally acquired by Marcos, his family and associates and bring them to justice.

Former first lady Imelda Marcos, a well-respected opposition figure during the martial law years known for her poverty and integrity, was named head of the commission. He served for one year, then quit to run for a Senate seat.

Twenty-one years after it was set up, the PCGG has been able to recover P61.8 billion, roughly $1.2 billion of the loot that was esti-

GOOD NEWS FROM KOMIKS: May Carlos J. Caparas.

He is offering scholarships and loans of cash incentives to budding komiks writers and cartoonists from Batangas to Zamboanga.

"It would be a great idea to gather all these hidden talents, help them perfect their craft, give them a ready publication and in the process help revive the dying komiks industry," he said.

He said it was pushed aside. "Now, it's time to add young and potential komiks writers and cartoonists to my list of scholars," Caparas told the Inquirer.

His wife, komiks actress producer Donna Villa, agreed. "It's very worthy cause," she said.

'Losing' firm's execs got P66M in pay, perks

By Daxini L. Lucas

HOW CAN A SOBBING COMPANY, whose only business activity is lowering its stock in the money market, still manage to pay P21 million after paying over P11 million during the same year?

More importantly, how can the same firm pay more to its top officers and directors a total of P66.2 million in salaries, benefits and bonuses over the last three years, if it is itself losing money?

Such is the situation of the Philippine Communications Satellite Corp. (Philcomsat) and its subsidiary Philippine Holdings Corp. (PHC) which has been under the control of the government and the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG) since 1996.

"PHC is a distressed and failing company," said Philippine president and director Fildefe I. Babilon. "They are the antithesis of good government."

Cops, troops on red alert

By Alvin Pags and Christine S. Arellano

THE MILITARY AND THE POLICE WENT ON RED alert yesterday ahead of the 21st anniversary of the first people power uprising.

The move is a precautionary measure "to thwart any plot to disrupt the celebration by any group," Philippine National Police Chief Oscar Callison said in a statement.

Last year, anniversary celebrations of the EDSA Revolution resulted in the death of 14-year-old Marissa Santiago. She was killed in a riot during the celebration of the 10th anniversary of the EDSA Revolution.

A state of emergency was imposed to thwart any government move to use a military-backed coup attempt led by Army Reserve Commander Gen. Danilo Lim and some Marine officers against the government.

Both military and police officials said they have not received any information to indicate there are any plans to disrupt the celebration.

"We just want to make sure there are no violent police forces to address any situation whenever it arises," said PNP spokesperson Chief Supt. Ramon Pangasinan.

Callison said they have received information from the military that there are no plans to disrupt the celebration.

"While these groups are not a threat, the military is in a state of readiness to respond to any situation," Callison said.

CLIVE SHAYE, 34, was among the first to join the 1986 EDSA Revolution. He is now a member of the Philippine National Police. He is shown here with other police officers.

PHILIPPINES

A decade after its establishment, the World Trade Center Manila (WTCMM) continues its mission to be a world-class venue for international and local exhibitions and seminars in the Philippines. WTCMM provides a venue for international manufacturing, trading, and investment to invest and explore business opportunities. The holding of three international design/Philippine products and seminars to keep abreast with the latest in global designs, trends and standards and showcase their products to buyers and guests from all over the world.

As our economic recovery gains further momentum, I urge each and everyone to take advantage of this opportunity and visit us here in WTCM that can foster growth in our international trade and secure our rightful place on the map of the global WFT and tourism industries.

OF TRADE AND INDUSTRY

The warmest greetings to the management and staff of the North Tyneside Cancer Music Centre (NTCCMC) on your thirtieth year 10th Anniversary on January 17, 2014.

The establishment of the World Trade Center Metro Manila is a booster to the Philippine trade and industry sectors by providing a world class venue for international and local exhibitions and events.

The exhibition industry has proven to be an area studied as international trade by exporting the best and the latest technology and services from all over the world to our local businessmen, and in turn, allowing our exporters to showcase their products and services to potential buyers from here.

WTCOM has indeed become a preferred venue for local businesses who want to make inroads into the global market and to international companies to expose their products and services to potential local trading partners, distributors and buyers through the biggest and most well-attended exhibitions and trade fairs in the country.

Finally, WTTWBB places its Philippines in the map of international trade, side-by-side with over 100 countries! World Trade Centers is everywhere! No country off on the world!

In BTCHMB, we strongly and sincerely congratulate you for 10 years of promoting environmental trade and business.

MESSAGE
SECRETARY OF THE BUREAU

On behalf of the Department of Justice, I wish to congratulate the World Trade Center Master Builders (WTBMB) on its 30th anniversary.

Incumbents in WCTUMs are helping promote innovation by providing a world-class venue for the various international and local businesses, investors, financial, non-financial and educational institutions. Among the biggest and most prestigious trade shows and conferences is expected to draw 100,000 visitors in 2008. WCTUMs is a platform that shows opportunity of providing high quality, secure and growing the most innovative and best equipped infrastructure facilities. It will also successfully foster international growth and support. For one, it will help bring equipment, construction facilities and services to the market. It will also help in the development of related fields in WCTUMs that is in the industrial sector. With its world-class amenities, WCTUMs is able to attract business exhibitors and visitors to participate in international exhibitions and events globally and allow them to explore and expand their business in the region, as well as in their country and their business capability and create a successful and fast growing one known as WCTUMs.

All these findings are useful and have to be carefully interpreted in terms of individual variation, from local adaptations, food and environment, life, economic and genetic.

We take the opportunity to wish WFMJ many years of promoting the Philippines as an excellent INCE destination. (Babaloo)

PhilHealth Trade Union (Metro Manila) WFM, MCA, and private employers are in 100% compliance with the law. In the rest of the country, compliance is low. The law is not enforced in most of the country. It is the only labor law in the Philippines that is globally recognized by the International Union of Pure and Applied Chemists (IUPAC), the global association of the petroleum industry, and by the International Maritime Organization (IMO).

Since its establishment in 1996, WTCMR has evolved to a catalyst for the development of an industry's international trade and tourism by introducing the concept of the World Trade Fair as a high-end marketing platform for international trade and tourism. WTCMR has introduced this concept into the world's first and only The World Trade Fair in Hong Kong and Macau. The WTCMR has achieved this by providing a world-class exhibition space, quality services and facilities and access to a large audience. Their products and services are manufactured and sold from a University, which provides global connections and an appropriate environment for the development of the trade and tourism industries from all over the world. Through these international achievements, we hope manufacturers can grasp the opportunity to trade abroad with the latest global trends and designs. WTCMR also provides an international, multi-media platform for the promotion of trade and tourism through global networks. For more information, please visit www.wtcmr.com.

It is an odd coincidence, but I think would like to celebrate the milestone with a complete commitment to peace and human rights everywhere. I'll do it. The director is gone.

'Impossible,' Bong Pineda says of team-up with Lapid

CITY OF SAN FERNANDO—Suspected "jueteng" lord Rodolfo "Bong" Pineda ruled out a possible alliance between his wife, Lila, and incumbent Gov. Mark Lapid as President Macapagal-Arroyo won't make public her endorsement of either Lila or Mark as her candidate for governor of her home province.

THE TIES Bong Pineda and his wife Lila are seen here with President Macapagal-Arroyo and her family. Pineda is the brother of Lila Pineda, who is running for governor of Pangasinana. Pineda, whose husband Bong was suspected of financing "jueteng," is a close friend of the President.

"Everything is open. The door is not shut down or closed," Lapid said in response to a question on the possibility of a Lapid-Lila Pineda team-up, with him ruling himself out as he is going away to be sworn in on his own province.

The Bong Pineda said a possible alliance with Lapid was an "impossible" idea.

He said what was clear on Tuesday, when the interview was held, was that the administration was "impaired" by the death of the late Lila Pineda, who he said, like his father, was "a very good person."

In the province of the late Gov. Macapagal-Arroyo, the 28-year-old governor was made to sit in with Vice President Noli De Guzman. He was given the task of leading the province's "opening program."

Lipa in the writings of a National Artist

"To be a good writer, a student must read various literary works and start writing his own experiences"

By Nita Catherine Collaps
 Lipa City

THE CITY GOVERNMENT OF LIPA plans to establish a creative writing program to provide grants to deserving proposals for the publication of original literary works either in English or Filipino.

It also plans to establish a library showcasing the works of award-winning poets, playwrights, critics and fictionists, writes the Lipa-based Manananggaling columnist.

The aim is to make Manananggaling well-known with Lipa as one from the city of the man who was born and raised by the city.

Lambino, who was graduated National Artist for Literature in April 2000, was welcomed by his former high school classmates and city residents with a rapturous and cordial of his visits during a homecoming Feb. 21.

The homecoming had the theme "My Lipa as Being Manananggaling." (Creative writing).

Lambino's refusal of him his hometown province province in his literary work.

Many of his literary pieces and creative ones are that took place in Lipa.

"Lipa has largely contributed to my literary development," Lambino said in Filipino.

He added that a writer's experience in his hometown has shaped part of him in his writing.

"My own became a factor in my education because I wanted to be the observer of my own existence and to determine the nature, events, and scenes of human and divine in my surroundings."

These details, which have become sources of material for his literary pieces, emerged from the memories of his experiences, he said.

Many of his winning works also reflected his childhood, departure and return to his hometown.

Images of youth

Lambino was just 1 year old when his father, Timoteo, died from a brain tumor, broke his back and died, a few years later, his mother, Concepcion, suffered from cancer and died.

During his childhood, who was fondly called Seng, and his older sister were taken care of by their paternal grandparents, Isidro and Isolina.

One of Lambino's unforgettable experiences was returning to his uncle Angilio his grandmother's birthday.

Another experience was depicted in a poem titled "My Father, Through My Eyes," Manananggaling Lipa City.

The poem provided details of his search for his mother at the start of his early years.

Saving lives even when there's no fire

By Delfin Mallari Jr.
 Lipa City

"Saving human lives is a fulfilling and gratifying task even if it also means putting our lives on the line"

TO THE ORDINARY PERSON, a fireman's job involves responding to fire alarms, connecting hoses to the nearest fire hydrant, holding nozzles and directing water streams towards a raging fire.

But for Fire Officer 1 Joseph Lambino, 39, being a fireman means "saving lives even when there's no fire, saving them in the face of imminent danger and helping them to safety."

Lambino, a member of the Lipa City Fire Station, was recently honored "Fireman of the Year" by the Bureau of Fire Protection in the Calabarzon (Cavite, Laguna, Batangas and Quezon) region.

PSALM head quits; Transco rebid seen in '08

ICTSI exec eyed as replacement

By Miguel Lina

THE HEAD OF PRIVATE SECTOR ASSETS AND Liabilities Management Corp. (PSALM) has resigned, less than three weeks after the bidding for the nationwide transmission grid Transco was declared a failure.

Nemes Dorio, whose resignation was accepted by Malcolms, previously said he leaving the government would give him the chance "to take a much needed break" and was not at all prompted by the failed Transco bidding.

"I would like to make this announcement to dispel operations that I have been forced to consider my resignation because of the outcome of the bidding for the 20-year concession of the Transco," Dorio said.

"As early as last week, I have made a personal commitment that I will finish this specific matter."

MAMASITA Corned Beef Balls are hard to resist.

Finding joy—and profit—at home

IN JOURNALISM, A NOSE FOR news, an instinct for knowing what will make an interesting story, is a valued gift.

Concha "Chit" Ranao Salud has something—most accurately, some things—just at hand.

Salud has built up a business that now employs some of the most popular items, both local and imported, in supermarkets and grocery stores.

Quite appropriately her line of merchandise is a collection of food products. Though she started by selling her husband's "Young" brand corned beef balls, she has since expanded to include a wide range of products.

She was initially egged on by her husband and guided by her mother's advice: "Salud, just focus on what you know and do it well."

Out of the family business

But Salud was not born in a gourmet kitchen. Her family's own business, after all, was a grocery store in Manila.

After starting by selling rice and, later, by selling corned beef balls, she moved on to selling other products for her family's business.

Going into food, the entrepreneur, who trained as a teacher, achieved her distribution business on her husband's native island of Iloilo.

The single product was sold in a store in a Manila branch, the family ran. A relative accident that reduced the store to rubble.

Salud has been diversifying her offerings. Some products, managers do put and produce do put the cooked beef balls were added to her list of goods. Though she said she did not cook, that did not stop her from using recipes she found from her mother.

In fact, she was proving her skill as a student in her mother's growing business. She had learned, several years, including those from Manila like the mother from Manila.

Her instinct for knowing what the Filipino consumer will want has made her a pioneer in several fields.

Forward-looking

Years before many stores would be, Salud was already supplying supermarkets and groceries items made locally, from corned beef balls to chicken and cooked ham.

"It's not just meat," she recalled. The mother, said her that she was "very busy" because she was distributing the food from her home.

But in her hometown, Philippines, maintaining the staff of her mother's food was difficult. Products spoiled easily and had to be shipped out of Manila, to the biggest part of the business.

Even as the list of healthy food products grew, Salud also shifted to other money-making ventures. She started at the university of her growing and profitable business.

"With this money, my mother said," she said with a smile, "I can do more."

But she retained the memory of her business. From distribution, she branched to a restaurant operation with her mother's business in Manila. In 1990, she did so with her mother's help, serving Filipino meals, years before the current chain opened their first branch.

Tough business

The restaurant business was tough, however, as were her ventures in handicrafts and
